FREQUENCY

The Reader Magazine is published quarterly and distributed monthly. The Reader developed this original distribution method for businesses to pay less and get more from their advertising dollars. Prices are less because the printing is done in large quarterly print runs. Results are better because advertisers' messages are reaching people every month (not just four times a year). How does it work? Each zone of 30,000 households is divided evenly into three sections. Each section of the city gets the same quarterly issue over the course of three months, distributed in quantities of 10,000 mailings per month. The first month, the first section is sent the quarterly issue, the next month the next section gets the same issue, and the third month, the remaining section gets the same quarterly issue. The Reader's original distribution method dramatically helps businesses save and get great results.

CIRCULATION

There are five unique Reader Magazines in San Bernardino County, each with content and advertising that relates to a specific city or group of cities. Each Reader Magazine has a circulation of 30,000 residential and business addresses. These five Reader Magazines give an advertiser the power to reach from 30,000 to 150,000 addresses (5 zones x 30,000 addresses), which represents 375,000 people.

VALUE MONTHLY RATES

By publishing quarterly, The Reader Magazine saves a bundle in production costs, which is passed directly to our advertisers in the form of lower ad placement costs. By distributing the 30,000 quarterly publications (per zone) to 10,000 unique addresses per month, message longevity and market penetration are enhanced, providing a powerful advertising combination. The table below presents the monthly rates for 10,000 mailings (per zone). The minimum insertion is 3 months, reaching the zone's 30,000 target households during that quarter. Advertisers receive excellent rate discounts for 1-year contracts and even greater discounts for 2-year contracts. Ad designs can be changed every quarter as desired. With rates as low as $165/month to reach the best consumer households in an entire city, The Reader Magazine offers incredible value! Increase the size of your ad and/or number of zones and the value gets even better.

To determine the total monthly rate of multi-zone placement, simply multiply the appropriate rate by the number of zones. For example, a 1/6 page ad running in 2 zones is $188 (monthly rate) x 2 (number of zones) = $376/month (for 20,000 mailings per month!)

MARKET RESEARCH

One of the Reader's greatest values is its ability to target the market. Our research department works closely with our clients to identify those areas of our circulation area that will provide the most value. By combing through demographic and consumer spending databases, and with real-world, real-market experience, we help companies do a lot of the marketing work necessary for a successful campaign.

ENVIRONMENTAL AWARENESS

The Reader is extremely mindful of waste accumulated during production. In fact, we pride ourselves on being respectful of the environment. The Reader's film development process used to involve silver, but we've now switched to environmentally friendly vinegar.

COMMUNITY SUPPORT

The Reader believes in giving back to the communities that have made our success possible. While our publication remains localized, our charitable spirit spans across California. The marketing department works closely with local charities and non-profits to organize sponsorships of local events, produce promotional partnerships and publishes 1.9 million free non-profit notices a year. The Reader donates many thousands of dollars of advertising space every year to philanthropic efforts. Sponsorships include:

- Inland Empire United Way
- American Cancer Society
- Mercy Corps
- Christian Children's Fund
- Special Olympics
- Military Order of the Purple Heart
- Inland Empire YMCA
- Boys Scouts of America - California Inland Empire Council
- The Humane Society of the United States

PROVE YOUR IMPACT WITH THE READER MAG

City, county, state and federal governments are inducing businesses to be carbon neutral by making it a factor in their awarding of $9.3 billion in contracts to businesses like yours in California in 2015.

One way you can get there is by using The Reader Magazine, which has established third-party verification of the dramatic and positive impact on the environment from advertisers using it.

In 2012, The Reader asked the Environmental Paper Network, a national, independent, non-profit that measures the energy consumed from paper production and disposal to measure the specific environmental impact of using The Reader Magazine, compared to less innovative, more wasteful "junk mailers". It was "high frequency, low quality" vs. "low frequency, high quality".

The savings and impact are significant not only because they are verifiable and the evidence can easily be shared on a government contract application (by linking to the data, available at www.readermagazine.net/impact), but it also provides your business the opportunity to stand out from competitors, and reinforce existing relationships-- including customers-- for whom your environmental impact is important.

In fact, The Reader provides digital and print posters-- free-- you can post on social media and at your office to share with customers the exact amount of positive environmental impact you make, like those here (<http://www.reader.us/impactposter/>).

Finally, the cost makes it a fair trade. You can reach the entire circulation of 390,000 people every quarter, a readership earning $7 billion, with a full-page, full-color ad, for only 3¢ per person reached per month, which works out to only $3,992/month, when you order a year's worth of advertising. Compared to weekly direct mail or individual direct mail you'll also save:

- 68 tons of wood saved each year
- 460,000 gallons of water saved each year
- 96 tons of greenhouse gasses reduced each year
- plus 12 other natural resources saved and pollutants reduced
