Welcome Letter by Prof. Paula Banerjee, President IASFM, Director, MCRG and Professor, Department of South and South East Asian Studies, University of Calcutta

On behalf of IASFM, I welcome you all to our 16th conference. This year our theme is Rethinking Forced Migration and Displacement: Theory, Policy, and Praxis. And as you can see, we are holding the conference in Poznan, Poland.

Holding a conference on forced migration in Poland has its own significance. Poland in the 19th century faced a huge refugee crisis when the country itself survived because of refugee memory. Among the post World War II refugees a huge number were Poles who remained footloose even in their own land for years after World War II. Refugee issues, therefore, to the Polish people is not something new. Also holding a conference on refugees in today's Europe has its own significance. Europe is said to be witnessing a "refugee crisis" as millions of Syrians are desperately fleeing their homes and trying to reach the shores of this continent in their rickety dinghy boats. While some of the countries, particularly Germany, are relatively open in accepting the refugees, there are many that feel forced to refuse EU's diktat on refugee quota. Their concern is security especially after the recent terror attacks in Paris, Brussels and Istanbul and perhaps also economy. Today some of the leaders are invoking the concept of "European culture", to cover up growing xenophobia, racism and communal hatred. These are indeed troubling times. The referendum in UK in favour of breaking away from European Union may further give rise to intense nationalism. Will the European Union disintegrate further on the face of this "refugee crisis"? I do not know. But what I know for sure is that today Turkey, Pakistan, Iran and Lebanon host maximum number of refugees and yet none of them are in Europe. Also, I know of other refugees that the mainstream global media tend to forget. Take the case of Rohingya Muslims for instance. They are being pushed out daily from Aung San Suu Kyi's Myanmar. What I am suggesting here is to rethink the notion of a "refugee crisis" and more importantly the notion of crisis itself.

That so many of us have assembled here to talk about forced migration and about the refugees is immensely inspiring. Among us, I believe, there are refugee activists, social workers, journalists and scholars from all over the world. So I am looking forward to papers of various shades– from theoretical to experiential, from policy studies to narratives of resistance, on labour migration, gender issues, climate refugees, internal displacement and stateless people. Also, I know for sure, there are a number of papers that deal with "refugee crisis" and forced migration beyond Europe – in Global South from where I come and where my own work is situated.

With this, let me once again welcome you all to the conference. I want to extend my sincere thanks to our hosts and to the IASFM organizing committee. I look forward to an exciting time in the conference and in Poznan. And hopelessly optimistic that I am, I do look forward to a different world.

Thank You
Paula Banerjee

Concert Released Sounds by Maciej Rychły & Mateusz Rychły

The idea of decoding musical notation from selected pieces of Polish and European painting, and to organise a concert of the music inscribed by painters in their pictures has been taking shape over several years. We began our forays into reading the musical notation in paintings by studying old works with music-related scenes, where a group of musicians gathers around the invisible phenomenon of music. It may seem absurd that the artists who created painting, and thus visual signs, were fascinated by such a situation. Nonetheless, scenes with a musical theme very often have picture motifs.

Lisa Gilad Prize

The Lisa Gilad Prize was established in memory of its namesake who died at a young age in a tragic accident in 1996. An anthropologist, Lisa Gilad was the very first social scientist to be appointed to Immigration and Refugee Board Canada. She conducted ethnographic research on forced migrants and was a devoted member of the scholarly network that established the IASFM. The Prize honours a younger participant in the IASFM who has made 'particularly meritorious' contribution to refugee scholarship in a publication in the Journal of Refugee Studies. This year, Susan Kneebone and Ellen Percy Kraly sought to act on the spirit of the prize and the memory of Lisa Gilad by considering the originality of papers, the advancement of knowledge concerning refugees, the ways in which theory and field research were integrated, and the critical as well as fresh perspective on responses to refugees.

10.00-11.30

Plenary Session One. *The European Union and the Challenges of Forced Migration: From Economic Crisis to Protection Crisis?

Moderator: Elżbieta M. Goździak, Georgetown University
Federico Soda, IOM Coordination Office for the Mediterranean in Rome
Aurélien Ponthieu, Médecins sans Frontières, Brussels
Heaven Crawley, Coventry University

During the course of 2015 more than a million people crossed the Mediterranean, arriving at the shores of southern Europe, in search of protection or a better life for themselves and their families. In the same period at least 3,500 people drowned, confirming the Mediterranean as the most deadly sea crossing in the world. Although migration across the Mediterranean to Europe is nothing new, the so-called 'migration crisis' of 2015 saw rapid shifts in routes and modes of travel to - and across - Europe. And it dramatically exposed not only the complex and overlapping continuum between political and economic factors driving migration but the inability of European policy makers to devise policy responses in response to 'mixed' migration flows. This plenary session provides an overview of movements and flows across the Mediterranean in 2015 unpacking the complex drivers of increased migration in the region and the continuum between forced and other forms of displacement. It also raises questions about the ability of Europe to provide protection and humanitarian assistance to those most in need.

Moderator: Dianna Shandy, Macalester College and the University of Minnesota

Alexander T. Aleinikoff, Columbia Global Policy Initiative, Migration Policy Institute (DC)

will talk on Rethinking the International Refugee Regime.

Commentators:

Susan Martin, Georgetown University

Graeme Rodgers, International Rescue Committee in New York

Based on journalist accounts, an archive of oral histories of Indo-Chinese refugees, and academic works on diaspora, the paper examines three forms of refugee communities: communities in refugee camps, resettlement communities, and communities created on-line. I discuss how these forms of community link with concepts of refugee protection and the three traditional “durable solutions”—return, local integration, resettlement. Camp communities represent the present for many refugees; they are not viewed as permanent but are often in fact indefinite. I rely on Ben Rawlence’s account of the Dadaab refugee camp. The Comprehensive Plan of Action for Indo-Chinese Refugees is discussed as a solution of the past, providing resettlement in the US for more than 1 million refugees. As an oral history of one refugee shows, this durable solution poses complex questions of assimilation and integration even as it frequently represents the most sought after solution. Examination of several websites and recent academic work yields a possible third kind of community, created by refugees, exiles and migrants on the internet. It is a question for further research, I suggest, whether the web presences constitute a new form of “refugee consciousness”—one that looks homeward while using virtual space to create a place for politics and culture not available at home.

In this panel, researchers and practitioners will debate the relationship between the work they do to obtain and represent knowledge on the one hand, and their potential contribution to societal transformation on the other. How do different actors working with forced migration try to guarantee that the knowledge they create reflect reality, despite the many challenges they face while gathering data in conflict, post-conflict and displacement contexts? What is the basis for their authority when contributing 'expert knowledge'; for example when asked to comment on the ongoing crisis in hosting refugees in Europe? Do they see it as their task to try to contribute to change and if so, change of what kind? What kind of knowledge is needed for this and what exactly is the responsibility of the researcher/practitioner in disseminating this knowledge and in the changes it ultimately may lead to?

10.30-11.00 Coffee break

5. Site visit to Migrant Info Point (MIP) in Poznań

Migrant Info Point is the first non-governmental organization in Poznań to facilitate immigrant integration. MIP provides a wide range of assistance to migrants, including exchange of information about daily life in Poznań, assistance with residency permits and other legal issues, labor market analysis and job placement, and help with filling out necessary paperwork. Additionally, MIP supports and empowers migrants to become self-sufficient and independent new residents in Poznań.

There will be two visits: on July 14 and July 15, 1.30-2.30

ul. Św. Marcin 78, (next building to the Castle / Zamek), room 421, 4th floor

Please register for site visit to MIP in reception/information point.

6. Photographic exhibition *Climate Refugees and Stateless Populations of Bangladesh

Hugh Tuckfield & Nellie LeBeau Tuckfield, room 4.1

A photographic exhibition documenting the lives of two of the most vulnerable groups in Dhaka, Bangladesh, as they fight for rights, refuge, and survival: The Stranded Pakistanis of Camp Geneva and The Pavement Dwellers of Dhaka.

The Stranded Pakistanis

In slum-like camps scattered throughout Dhaka live the Stranded Pakistanis— also known as the Bihari, or, the Besieged. Many of this Urdu-speaking minority of Bangladesh supported West Pakistan during the Bangladesh Liberation War of 1971. After their defeat, almost one million of the Urdu speakers remained stranded in Bangladesh and placed in camps; most prevented from entering Pakistan, leaving Bangladesh, or receiving Bangladesh statehood. 45 years later, these Stranded Pakistanis lack the legal right to access work, education, health care, or participate in any life outside the camps.

The Pavement Dwellers – Dhaka's Climate Refugees

Seven million people, representing 40% of Dhaka's total population, live in the slums, riverbanks, parks and trains stations of the city. The IOM and UN Habitat have estimated that 70% of these seven million residents have arrived as a consequence of climate change. There is no official Bangladeshi state policy to address the lack of housing in Dhaka.

About the Photographers Hugh Tuckfield and Nellie LeBeau Tuckfield

Hugh's background is in law and economics. He is a PhD candidate in the Faculty of Arts at Sydney University and his thesis is titled: Protracted Refugee Situations in Nepal and Bangladesh: A Comparative Analysis of the Tibetans, the Bhutanese, the Rohingya and the Stranded Pakistanis. A 2013 graduate of the University's Master of Human Rights and Democratization (Asia- Pacific Region), his dissertation examined the influence of US anti-human trafficking legislation on Nepal. Whilst studying in Nepal, Hugh was a visiting lecturer at the Kathmandu School of Law and served as a consultant to the UN and several national and international NGOs. Nellie has developed human rights empowerment, education, and conflict resolution programs alongside at-risk communities in several countries, with an emphasis on displacement and shelter. Hugh and Nellie worked on anti human trafficking projects targeting orphanages and children's homes in Nepal; and engaged in advocacy for the rights of urban refugees in Nepal seeking resettlement in Australia. In 2014 they travelled to Dhaka, Bangladesh to research and document the lives of Dhaka's climate change refugees and the Stranded Pakistanis in Camp Geneva.
